Feng Shui Kitchener - Plainly the translation of Feng Shui the oriental idea means "wind and water." The concepts are more simply understood with experience that it is pronounced or defined. Feng Shui must be experienced to be able to completely comprehend its ramifications on the human spirit. The intangible energy referred to as chi is ever present and surrounds the meaning and the application of Feng Shui. While it is elusive, chi is everywhere in the universe and is considered one's aesthetic periphery. Feng Shui reveals itself in our attitudes regarding landscape and regarding life. It is the framework we place either unconsciously or consciously all-around our lives.

According to the customs in the Orient, object placing like buildings, graves and furniture is based on the patterns recognized all through the flow of chi and yin and yang. Together, yin and yang energies produce both positive and negative effects. Feng Shui is made up of five elements. These elements are known as earth, wood, water, metal and fire. They blend in their own particular ways to create either destructive or positive cycles. In order for optimum Feng Shui to be obtained within whichever room, all of the five elements will be included without being overpowered by whichever one of them separately.

For example, if metal elements as in modern furniture pieces dominate an area, the effect could be balanced by placing wood elements to the room like green plants. Candles could even be incorporated to be able to form the fire component. When applying Feng Shui as a design feature within one's house, it is vital to use natural substances whenever possible. The double aspects of yin and yang always reign supreme in Feng Shui for the reason that the ultimate objective is to generate a harmonious balance amongst natural objects and human beings.

The bedroom is considered amongst the most essential rooms in any house. The bedroom is vital to the flow of energy all over the home. Beds themselves are believed to have power places too. Some ancient Asian philosophy states that the energy from someone who ever slept in a bed leaves a residue. For optimum Feng Shui, the way the bed is placed in relation to the bedroom door must be considered. The door must always be seen from the bed. If the door is not seen from the bed, anybody could use a mirror in such a way that it will reflect the door. This would restore Feng Shui.

Feng Shui links life and landscape together and all things in life depend upon each other. The Oriental way of thinking believes the landscape is a breathing and living entity. There are several aspects regarding humanity and heaven and earth that the Western world could think about as people in the east do. Just as Shakespeare said in Hamlet, "There are more things in heaven and earth, my dear Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."
